Although he now hails from Port Huron, Michigan, Thomas D. Irwin is the former president and chief executive officer of the Midway Auto Group in Phoenix, Arizona. The business is one of the premier Chevrolet, Nissan, Infiniti, Isuzu, Pontiac, Buick, and GMC dealers in the United States. Tom, an avid traveler, supports numerous civic and private organizations.

At Notre Dame, Tom is a member the Rockne Heritage Fund Director’s Circle and the Advisory Council for the Hesburgh Libraries. He is proud of his two children, William (’10), a multitalented sports enthusiast, and Amber, a gifted equestrian.

As the University ascends among the ranks of the world’s finest institutions of higher learning, the Hesburgh Libraries face ever greater challenges to providing commensurate resources, programs, and services in support of Notre Dame’s academic aspirations.

The libraries are thus in a continual process of growing and developing their collections and services to align with and support the curricular and research needs of the broader University community. The Irwin Endowment helps to provide not only the physical books and journals necessary for such endeavors, but also the electronic information resources that can be made available from any location in the world, at any time, at the touch of one’s fingertips.

The Thomas Irwin General Library Endowment is a flexible and vital partner of the Hesburgh Libraries, now and in perpetuity.
