Charles Sacher (’61, ’64 JD) is a founding partner of Sacher, Martini & Sacher, P.A. He has been a member of the Advisory Council for the Notre Dame Law School since 1991.

He and his wife, Dorothy, a graduate of Florida State University, are active in the Miami community as fellows of Fairchild Tropical Garden, where Charles serves on the board of trustees; the Brickell Avenue Literary Society, where he serves on the board of advisors; and the Montgomery Botanical Center, where he serves on the board of directors. Dorothy is a past president of the Miami Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women. They have three sons: Charles S. (’89, ’92 JD), John M. (’92), and Richard J. (’93). The Sachers are longtime members of the Edward Frederick Sorin Society and the Order of St. Thomas More.

The Sacher Endowment enables the Hesburgh Libraries to provide improved resources for research and teaching on the American South. Its income is being used to support the acquisition of primary and secondary materials — both print and non-print — dealing with southern authors, the literature of the South, southern culture, southern and regional state histories, and source materials on the South in general.

The 44-volume Garland Series of Faulkner’s manuscripts is one example of a fine addition to the libraries’ collection that is extensively used, as are the other manuscripts of southern writers that the Sacher Endowment has made available.
