The Ted Weber Jr. Family Collection
Advancing the Catholic Intellectual Heritage

Ted Weber Jr., who graduated magna cum laude from Notre Dame in 1945, and his late wife, Dorothy, moved to El Cerrito, California, in 1986, one year after he retired as the executive vice president of administration and staff services at McGraw-Hill, Inc., where he was also a member of the board of directors. He spent two years at General Electric before joining McGraw-Hill in 1949, serving as news editor, associate editor, and managing editor of Electrical Merchandising before becoming editor of the McGraw-Hill News in 1961. He was named executive vice president in 1979. Ted now resides in San Francisco.

Ted has been active in several organizations, including the Leukemia Society of America, the Industrial Communication Council, the Civilian/Military Institute, and the Angel Island Association in California. This collection is named for Ted’s four sons (one of whom is a 1974 Notre Dame graduate), their wives, and his six grandchildren.

The Weber Collection will advance the Catholic intellectual tradition by allowing the Hesburgh Libraries to become a humanistic laboratory replete with collections reflective of the past and influential to the future of the Church.

With the support of this endowment, the University will be better able to build primary source materials that encompass past centuries through the written word, including novels, memoirs, travel narratives, newspapers, and popular periodicals.

The Webers have two additional collections at the Named level.
